

Covered. Connected. ASCP.

Angela left a good job as an analyst to become an esthetician, running her own business in Seattle, Washington. She's using every skill she has and is gaining new ones—she calls it a satisfying balance of growth and mastery.

It only makes sense she's protected her practice and herself by joining Associated Skin Care Professionals (ASCP). ASCP provides superior liability coverage for skin care professionals like Angela and numerous business tools to help members pursue their dreams.

She sends a monthly e-mail newsletter to clients and prospects using ASCP's website hosting service and newsletter generator. "My membership truly pays for itself," she says.

Angela admits her new career was a little scary at first. But ASCP gives her ways to get connected with other professionals, stay on top of trends and techniques, and find new ways to help clients reach their potential.

"I see myself as a skin coach. I ask my clients about their skin goals, and together, we work toward them."

Angela holds her daughter, Molly, born September 14, 2004.