

Covered. Connected. ASCP.

Sandi had three years as a college business major before deciding to become an esthetician in Medford, Oregon. After obtaining her license, she began to think about starting her own business.

As a member of Associated Skin Care Professionals (ASCP), she receives the Successful Business Handbook. "I sure wish I'd had such useful guidance when I first started my business," she says.

She loves the challenge of constantly learning, which is good since new products and techniques are being introduced all the time. ASCP keeps her connected with the materials and resources to feed her interests.

"I strongly believe no skin care professional should be without liability insurance," she says. "Clients get a feeling of comfort when they see my school completion credential, additional training documents, and my certificate of insurance on the wall."
